Bunker to Bunker Chris Giza's Extraordinary Life

By Robyn Noll

From November of last year until mid-March, if you asked where Chris Giza was you might have been surprised to hear she was in Afghanistan, flying missions to help put bomb-makers out of business. For those who've played golf with her, it's easy to imagine her piloting an aircraft for a defense contractor doing reconnaissance. What may be harder to picture is her scrambling for the bunker her first time in Afghanistan during a rocket attack on her base. She's normally so calm in the bunker!

What's Chris' motivation for wanting to work 12 hour shifts in a war zone for the third time? It started by trying to gain the respect of her father, a West Pointer who served in Vietnam and in the State Department. Wanting to serve but be different, Chris entered the Navy's Officer Candidate School in 1973, the same year women were first allowed in flight training. Chris thought "I could do that," so she went to flight school in 1975. She became the seventh female Naval aviator and, eventually, only the second woman to ever fly jets.

Chris learned to play golf so she could see a man on the Naval Academy golf team. While the relationship only lasted about 7 years, her love of the game remains. Along the way she won five All-Navy golf championships and two Inter-Service championships. In 1999 and 2004 she won the EWGA National Championship, becoming the first to win it twice. Her favorite golf moment came in 1992, just after she moved to Louisiana. She joined the LWGA and found out she qualified for the State Women's Amateur Championship. Short on money, she bunked at the Air Force base instead of the hotel, and came out of nowhere to win the match play event, beating young local phenom and current LPGA player Meredith Duncan. It was Chris' greatest week of golf, one where she felt "in the zone" all week.

When she plays golf, she competes against herself, and doesn't need the killer instinct like in the Navy. Still, long-time friend Kelly Hollister advises "never count her out of any hole." Tenacious by nature, Chris doesn't know how to quit. After she retired from the Navy in 1996, she worked for the U.S. Marshals Service before taking retirement again and shifting to a private company. She jokes she "really" retired in 2012 to help her elderly mother. But once her mom entered assisted living, a friend told her about an opportunity to fly in a combat zone. She jumped at the chance, saying it finally makes her feel complete as a Naval aviator. Her work helps save lives by putting IED makers out of business, which she says gives her "a great sense of pride and accomplishment."

Ultimately Chris figured out that she didn't need to prove herself to her dad, that he loved her no matter what. Still, he must have been very proud of her accomplishments. Her friends, family, and dog Bailey were happy to have this gutsy lady return home safely, and hope she'll stay awhile before heading off to save the world again.

Muscular Dystrophy

No match for Anke Vanderdrift

By Mary Ann Souter

Moving to the United States from the Netherlands as a young woman would be a difficult adjustment for anyone changing cultures and leaving family and friends. But that's exactly what Anke Vanderdrift did 50 years ago when she was a young flight attendant for KLM in New York on a promotional tour. There, she met her future husband and started a new life in the U.S.

Anke was always an athletic person who enjoyed tennis, sailing and skiing. But by the time she was in her thirties, many changes had occurred in her life. She left an unhappy marriage, was mistakenly told she had ALS, a fatal disease, and was ultimately diagnosed with Charcot Marie Tooth, a form of muscular dystrophy. At 45, due to her physical limitations, she could no longer enjoy her favorite activities. Never thinking of quitting, she decided to try golf, which she thought would be easier on her weakening body.

Years of living in several New England states made it difficult for Anke to cope with the pain. The cold, wet climate took its toll on her and doctors recommended she move to a warmer environment. A new beginning in Florida was on the horizon and job hunting was a top priority. Although she had several years of university education, she was not able to find employment. Next step – going back to college. At 55 years old, she earned a degree in social work. "I was older than most of my instructors," she joked. Anke worked as a case manager for 12 years when her life was about to change again. "Humidity equaled pain," she said. "So I retired and started exploring active adult communities around the country. After months of research and travel, I found exactly what I wanted at Sun City Festival." Anke moved to Arizona in 2007 and joined the Sun City Festival Women's Golf Group and the AWGA.

"I am so fortunate," she said. "I was always in good shape, ate well, led a healthy lifestyle and have had a positive attitude." All of those attributes helped to slow the progression of her MD. Now 74 years old and living with MD, Anke is still an avid golfer playing at least four times a week wearing braces on her legs. Carlene Crnkovich, VP of the Sun City Festival WGG and Anke's friend, said, "It's amazing how she holds a golf club even though she can't open her fingers. She hits down the middle and plays a wicked short game!" Anke reported her handicap as 32 in the winter and 25 in the summer. "When it's cold, it's painful for me and it's harder to swing the club. In the summer, I get a lot of roll," she chuckled, "which helps my handicap!"

Anke's legacy is her annual Tournament for the MDA. "I wanted to give back and I wanted it to be something important to me without benefitting me personally," she said. All proceeds are donated to the Muscular Dystrophy Children's Camp in northern Arizona. The Anke Vanderdrift MDA Tournament has contributed almost $50,000 to date. The women of Copper Canyon and the local community add to its success by volunteering their time, providing materials and participating in the silent auction.

This year's tournament was held on January 18th, Anke's 74th birthday. 135 golfers participated at Copper Canyon where they raised $17,500, the most since the tournament began. "I'm the ambassador who makes sure everyone is happy," Anke said. And that she is! According to Carlene, she's a "people magnet" and head of their Sunshine Committee.

Anke's enthusiasm, perseverance and generous spirit are truly an inspiration for all golfers. In the end, it is apparent that Anke is good for golf and golf is good for Anke.

The Fun-damentals of Arizona Girls Golf

by Robyn Noll

Arizona is lucky to have two successful Girls Golf programs, each part of the LPGA*USGA Girls Golf initiative. Through these programs, girls not only learn how to drive, chip and putt, with instruction provided by LPGA and PGA teaching professionals, they also learn rules, etiquette, and course management. Volunteers are on hand to assist with and reinforce the lessons.

Getting instruction at a young age gives girls a solid foundation for a lifetime of enjoyment of the game, whether they choose to play only for fun or also at a competitive level. Along the way they gain confidence and self-esteem, and discover the value of honesty and integrity, skills that will help them no matter what they choose to do in the future. Directing Arizona's Girls Golf programs are two enthusiastic and energetic women who are deeply committed to helping young girls succeed. The first, Rose Nehring, has been involved in junior golf in the Tucson area for over 20 years, and has been Girls Golf of Tucson's Site Director since 2010. Cori Alberdi came onboard as the Site Director in Phoenix this January. She has worked with junior golf programs in Phoenix in a variety of capacities before, and is a former competitive junior golfer herself.

Both women would like to promote and grow their programs further, offering more girls from all backgrounds a chance to experience the game in an enjoyable, girl-friendly environment. They strive to create new events and fresh opportunities, and as an example, Phoenix has recently introduced a "Future Stars Academy" for more advanced players, and has created a colorful "Itty Bitty" golf clinic for 3, 4 & 5 year olds which puts the emphasis on PLAY when playing golf.

One of the wonderful things about LPGA*USGA Girls Golf is how engaged players and former players are with one another. A tournament in Phoenix this summer will see a number of alumni each teaming up with 3 to 4 girls currently in the program for a scramble. In Tucson, many of the girls in the higher levels of the program are earning Community Service Points volunteering at events and mentoring the younger girls. There are a lot of positive outcomes resulting from this interaction. As a way of thanking the older girls, following the event they get to play nine holes with a low handicap adult volunteer, and receive tips on course management, pace of play and club selection. It's a win-win for everyone involved.

So what can you do to help Arizona's young girl golfers? If you want to volunteer, are able to sponsor or donate to one of the programs, or know a young girl who wants to participate in this fantastic sport, you can always contact the chapter nearest you for more information.

What Happened in Vegas?

by Judy Fick and Peggy Iacobelli

They say “What Happens in Vegas Stays in Vegas”. That may be true sometimes, but not when it comes to the Rating Team that attended the USGA Western Calibration Seminar February 16-17. We’re happy to report that AWGA course rating captains Ann Chatham, Judy Fick, Peggy Iacobelli and Judi Lorenzen came in first place, and the AGA men came in first, too. The purpose of the annual seminar is to ensure each state association rates the same way, so handicaps will carry to courses nationwide. Each team was evaluated using individual tests, and by rating four holes on course, and then had both segments reviewed by USGA Master Raters. So for now we’re going to change that old Vegas motto to “Those Who Went to Vegas Return as Better Raters”... and hopefully as better teachers, too.

Arizona has over 350 golf courses, and each must be rated a minimum of every ten years - more often if it’s newer or has been renovated. If numbers are your thing, you too can become a course rater. We currently need help in the West Valley and training is available. Contact Robyn Noll at RNoll@awga.org for more information.

All About Ginny Zak

2014 AWGA President of the Board

By Mary Ann Souter

Ginny Zak loves life. She’s an energetic, spirited woman who brings a cheerful attitude to everything she does. A member of the AWGA Board of Directors since 2007, Ginny held the position of Handicap Chair from 2008 – 2013 and also served as Vice President in 2013. “Last year I was President in charge of Vice,” she said revealing her witty sense of humor, “and this year I was elected President. It’s going to be an interesting year!” No doubt she will be spreading her enthusiasm throughout the association.

Volunteering has been ongoing in Ginny’s life. She joined the AWGA and Superstition Mountain ladies group after moving from Buffalo, NY to the Valley in 2000. Active in their golf community, she served as President of the Women’s Golf Association of Western New York (an association of private clubs) and President of the Women’s Teams Association, which was comprised of 18 teams of golfers. “Golf has been an ambassador for me, enabling me to do so much. It gave me the opportunity to be a leader,” she said. As a knowledgeable golfer and earning USGA credentials, Ginny quickly became Handicap Chair at Superstition Mountain, a position she held for 10 years. As the AWGA Handicap Chair, she was a regular presenter at handicap seminars, which she unexpectedly found to be fun. “I discovered that I enjoy public speaking,” she said. And because Ginny learned to play golf as an adult, she recognizes that it’s a totally different experience for women learning the game than for kids. “I know what it feels like to be new at something and I’m eager to help women who are beginner golfers.” Ginny said she “heartily and enthusiastically supports the Ambassador

Program which is now Golf 101. “Helping women grow in the game and become passionate about it is a true joy for me.” Talk about loving the game – Ginny limits herself to playing golf only five days a week since she walks and carries her clubs.

Over the years, Ginny has earned a string of golf accomplishments. She was Club Champion at her home course in Buffalo seven times and played in the USGA Women’s Mid Am Championship in 1999. "I was 45 years old at the time," she said, "and everyone was asking me which of the players was my daughter! After explaining that I was the player, they started calling me Mom. After that, I played in the USGA Senior Women's Amateur Championship," she chuckled. Ginny is also a champion at Superstition Mountain where she was Match Play Champion and Club Champion in 2007. In 2009, she was Match Play Champion and Player of the Year. "2009 was a very good year," she said. Ginny just recently won the 2014 Club Championship at Superstition Mountain.

Not a stranger to the coveted hole-in-one, Ginny can boast 7 1/2 of them! So how did she get half a hole-in-one? Ask her about it. She's eager to tell her story. "I love to talk to people," she said. "As Board President, I want to hear from the women in our state and hopefully, curiosity about my half a hole-in-one will open the door for many interesting conversations."

Ginny is enjoying her new position. "There are so many accomplished women on the Board who truly inspire me. And I'm not being politically correct when I say that!" Yes, the AWGA Board is made up of extraordinary and talented women and this year the dynamic Ginny Zak is President!

2014 AWGA Season Opener

by Robyn Noll

The AWGA Season Opener that took place at Briarwood Country Club on February 23rd was a resounding success. The Four-Ball Stroke Play event got off to a shotgun start at 8:30am in Sun City West and the weather couldn't have been more ideal, with cloudless skies and temps warming up to the mid-70s by the turn. Players enjoyed Briarwood's traditional, parkland design that earns it accolades as a hidden jewel in the desert and where, at this time of year, the dormant Bermuda rough sharply defines gorgeous, tree-lined fairways. After the morning's play was over, Kim Eaton and Karen Pultz emerged victorious as the overall winners, with Pat Kuntz and Barbara Lail ham-and-egging their way to the prize for overall net.

Cindy Bryniarski, who was instrumental in bringing the tournament to her club, said "Briarwood truly enjoyed the opportunity the Season Opener gave us to showcase our club. Not enough people know we're here and have great golf and facilities to offer!" The facilities were definitely top of the line, and the course itself really wowed the players and AWGA staff. According to Karen Pultz, the course "had great flow and was framed nicely with bunkering. The challenge was managing the firmness of the greens to get close to the hole locations." In fact the greens are so firm that Kim Eaton advises to "hit it short and let it roll" when playing Briarwood.

The club stood out in one very unusual way during the tournament. Since it's a private club they didn't have rental carts to use. Instead, their members graciously loaned their street-legal carts to players, which were much faster and better looking than ordinary rentals. It was just one of the ways Briarwood made players feel special. Net winners Pat and Barbara both noted that the staff was welcoming and attentive to player needs, and that the food was fabulous. Players raved about the croissants and coffee before the event began, as well as a Sunday brunch complete with an amazing selection of breakfast, lunch and dinner options that included an omelet station, prime rib, a sundae bar and much more.

The AWGA's Erin Groeneveld says most people don't realize Briarwood has a clubhouse and course of such high caliber, and that it could easily host a USGA Men's or Women's Open Qualifier or Senior Tour event. Karen Pultz adds "If you get the opportunity to play it, do!" Need more encouragement? Not only do they have brunch every Sunday, they have a pastry chef on staff, as well.

Q. We, as desert dwellers are very familiar with our local wood rats, aka packrats (not to be confused with ground squirrels). Packrats gather up mounds of debris - from cholla cactus to scraps of rope and irrigation parts. If a packrat could fit a golf ball in his mouth, we would find those as well. There are so many of these nests on our golf course, is there any way we can get relief from them?

A. Pack rats are not burrowing animals, so you get no relief for a burrowing animal hole. Their middens (piles of refuse) are in desert areas, generally at the base of prickly pear or cholla cacti. If you find one in the middle of the fairway, we would mark it as ground under repair (GUR). But a ball in the desert should not be there in the first place. A ball in or near a packrat nest may be in an unplayable lie, but not GUR. There is no relief without penalty. In addition, if the ball is in the packrat midden and a rattlesnake is also in the neighborhood, as often happens, there is no relief for a dangerous situation unless the player would play the ball as it lies if the snake was not there. Such is the challenge of desert golf!

See the images below for the difference between pack rat middens vs. ground squirrel holes.

Women's Associations Come Together to Promote and Grow Women's Golf By Mary Pomroy

Each March, Arizona is host to a meeting where women leaders from golf associations around the country come together to discuss their businesses, recommend ideas and suggest solutions to issues relating to the health and well-being of women's golf. Welcome to WARM - The Women's

Association Roundtable Meeting! Founded in 2003 with only 4 states represented, the group has grown to 18 women's golf associations from 14 states. This annual event continues to draw new members who meet each year to exchange ideas and discuss ongoing challenges and successes. Using their collective wisdom, they are developing a nationwide outreach to attract women to the game, offering players a fun and challenging experience on the course and demonstrating that women's associations are effective catalysts for growing the game.

This year's key note speaker was Donna Orender, founder and CEO of Orender Unlimited of Jacksonville, Florida. Ms. Orender, who recently launched "Generation W", a brand focused on educating, inspiring, and connecting women and girls, kicked the meeting off with her insights into what is missing in the management of golf that keeps more women from making it a lifestyle choice. A very dynamic and entertaining speaker, Donna encouraged the attendees to continue to work to teach the predominantly male leaders in the game to "speak female", to understand and embrace the gender differences that naturally exist, and to be willing to think outside the box in seeking to grow women's golf, a stated goal of all of the organizations with a stake in the future of the game.

Board & staff of South Carolina and Delaware WGA's.

The WARM is a presentation of the Women's Golf Alliance, a membership organization of which the AWGA is a member association under our Information and Outreach program. Visit their website at www.womensgolfalliance.com

Geraldine "Gerry" Clark, age 72, of Thatcher, entered into rest on February 14, 2014, at the Mount Graham Regional Medical Center. Gerry was devoted to her role of wife and mother, but also took on various jobs including school bus driver, dental assistant, and constructor of mobile homes. She was always available to help any who needed her, doing the unrecognized and self-sacrificing work required for many who could not take care of themselves. Gerry loved to play golf, and she was good at it. She was a very active golfer at Mount Graham Golf Course, playing frequently and serving as their handicap chair. Gerry will be sorely missed by a great many people.

Building the Vision

The AWGA is graced with a multitude of volunteers who serve our membership for the good of golf in Arizona. A special group among these is our Board of Directors. These women have generally progressed to leadership positions by first becoming engaged at their local club level and advancing through State level committee work to gain the knowledge that enables them to guide the organization and assure its long-term growth in the industry. If you think you might enjoy being a part of building the vision of the AWGA, we encourage you to contact any of our Board members for more information. Then go to www.awga.com and complete a Volunteer Interest Form.

DEAR CADDY

Q "I often volunteer to keep the scorecard for my group on ladies day. I find it distracting to have players announce their scores to me while I am still trying to finish my own play on the hole. Is there a rule or is it just common courtesy to not announce your individual score on the putting green before all players have finished putting out? If not a rule is there a tactful way to handle the matter? It seems common place with our ladies association and upsetting on league days, when this occurs, but even more so when it is done during tournament play.

A The putting green is a very unique place for golfers and because of this, there are several etiquette rules to be aware of and follow when you are on the green. To answer your first question, No, there is no specific rule in the USGA's Rules of Golf that dictates where and when you are to announce an individual (hole) score. Possibly in match play, when asked, but I don't think this applies to your situation. In stroke play, the designated marker is responsible for keeping score and should, if necessary, on the way to the next teeing ground, check scores with players prior to recording. The principles of golf etiquette would certainly be your guide in this situation, and the prevailing theme is to show consideration to your fellow golfers at all times – meaning, one should not disturb their competitor by moving, talking or making unnecessary noise. It sounds as if you have a few ladies in your association who fail in the principles of golf etiquette!

I will venture to say your etiquette challenged golfers are not aware of their lapse in "early score announcement" and behave badly purely out of habit. I suggest this as I am guilty of doing this very thing! A tactful approach to addressing this would be to ask the designated marker to propose to all players, on the first teeing ground, that there is no need to announce scores, but rather she will ask for them, if need be, once they are off the green and on to the next hole. If the babble continues, gently remind players that there is no need to announce on the green, but off the green and with the marker when she is not concentrating on a putt, and has scorecard & pencil in hand. This makes much more sense..... Final thought - When on the green, let common sense and courtesy be your guide.
